For example, under the change in rules, some families can find comprehensive health coverage for as low as $4/month (costs might vary by county).

Here’s how:
- Mia and her husband earn a total $5,600 a month. They have two dependent children.
- Mia’s employer offers health insurance to her and her family.
- Mia pays $224 per month for her insurance through work. The cost of her plan increases to $1,456 per month when she adds her husband and two children.
- 9.12% of $5,600 (Mia’s total family monthly income) is $510.75 per month.

Since $1,456 is more than 9.12% of Mia’s total monthly family income, her husband and children can shop and get help paying for health coverage through Maine’s Health Insurance Marketplace, CoverME.gov.

*You or your family may be able to enroll in health coverage after January 15 if you qualify for a special enrollment period. Families who are eligible can enroll in MaineCare all year.
